Brendan Avallone practises in all areas of employment and industrial relations law, building on his 15 years' of experience in these areas before he signed the Bar Roll on 22 October 2015. He acts predominantly for employers and government.

Brendan's practice has been ranked in peer review journals The Best Lawyers in Australia 2018 (Labour and Employment Law), and in Doyle's Guide 2017 \(Leading Employment & WHS Junior Counsel – Victoria, 2017\).

Prior to joining the Victorian Bar, Brendan was a Special Counsel in the Human Resources and Industrial Relations group of a major law firm, acting for a number of Victorian and Australian Government Departments and agencies, and private sector employers.

Brendan has advised and acted in a number of high profile industrial relations cases, including the Victorian public sector nurses dispute, Victorian government teachers EBA negotiations and industrial action, Australia Post enterprise bargaining over a number of years and the pre-Christmas 2009 industrial action, and picketing and industrial action at the Boeing Fisherman's Bend site.

Brendan has appeared on behalf of employers and Government agencies in the Courts, the Fair Work Commission and its predecessors, in matters regarding industrial action, protected action ballot applications, industrial disputes, unfair dismissal applications and underpayment claims.

Brendan was seconded to the Department of Employment to assist in drafting workplace legislation in 2005-2006 and the Department of Finance, and was an Associate at the Australian Industrial Relations Commission in 2001-2002. He has a Master of Laws from the University of Melbourne, specialising in workplace relations, with a First Class Honours average.

Brendan recently presented at the Victorian Bar Industrial Bar Association's inaugural industrial law update: Recent developments regarding applications for protected action ballot order under s437. He regularly gives presentations for organisations including the Law Institute of Victoria, Akolade and Legalwise.

Committee Membership: Brendan is a member of the Committee of the Industrial Bar Association (2017). He also served as the Treasurer of the Industrial Relations Society of Victoria from 2007-2012 and on the IRSV Executive from 2007-2013.
